The new Mosaico high jewelry collection draws inspiration from some of the classic designs created by the brand's founder, Mr. Mario Buccellati, in the 1920s, and is masterfully reinterpreted by Mr. Andrea Buccellati. The pieces feature innovative and fashionable forms, incorporating the brilliance of diamonds and colored gemstones inspired by Byzantine mosaic art, radiating dazzling light in the interplay of light and shadow. The recurring decorative elements create a harmonious rhythm, while the color combinations evoke breathtaking elegance.

The "Timeless Beauty with Century-Old Craftsmanship" art appreciation exhibition by Buccellati is held at the Grande Praça in MGM MACAU from September 24 to October 8, and visitors can make reservations through the official platform. This exhibition focuses on the brand's jewelry craftsmanship rooted in the Renaissance, showcasing the iconic Rigato technique and Tulle craftsmanship. The Rigato technique is one of Buccellati's traditional carving skills. Artisans use engraving tools to create parallel lines on the metal surface, giving it a smooth and silky texture reminiscent of satin. The Tulle craftsmanship, named after it resembles the fabric of the same name, is a unique openwork technique. Artisans meticulously carve and thread gold, resulting in a honeycomb-like hexagonal openwork structure reminiscent of delicate Venetian lace.
